OWENSBORO, KY (WFIE) - Owensboro job-seekers have a new resource to help the hunt, a site called Owensboroworks.com.

Owensboroworks.com is a little different from other employment sites out there, allowing people searching for a job to post their education and qualifications online.

Local employers then have access to candidates' work information and can find the right candidate with much greater ease.

Nick Brake with the Owensboro Economic Development Corporation said it's a great database for companies.

"It's a really good way to let the job find you, different from a lot of other websites which are based on looking for jobs on the site. You just put your information and your credentials in on owensboroworks.com and all the local employers have access to it free of charge and they can find the kind of quality talent that they're looking for in a work force here in the region," said Brake.
